TEAMWORK | ERROR CULTURE | EMPOWERMENT

COURAGE TO MAKE 'SURVIVABLE' MISTAKES

Give everyone in your crew the chance to make survivable mistakes in order to grow. That creates a team culture of trust. Because errors are human. A chain of errors is deadly.

FLYING YOU ONLY LEARN BY FLYING

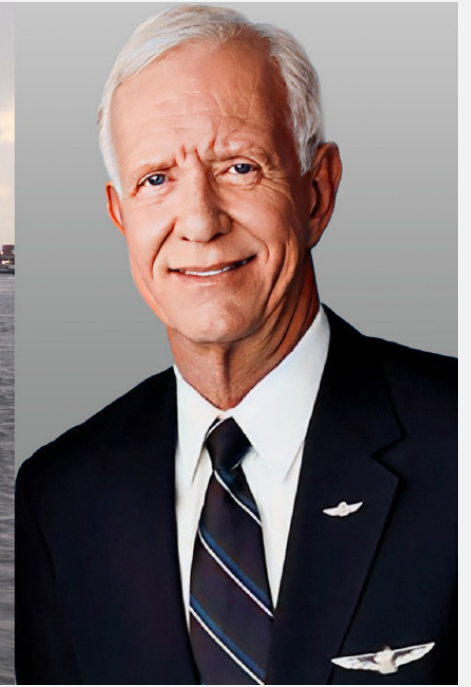

Pilots switch roles after each flight. Those who claim accountability must give their crews the opportunity to do so. Every captain needs people on board telling him what he needs to know. Not what he wants to hear.

"WE ALWAYS DID IT LIKE THAT"

Teams often fail due to 'Captain's Syndrome', which results from steep hierarchies and rigid routines. Leaders should constantly change perspectives and act as 'Pilot Monitoring'.

»A bad decision is better than no decision.«

LEADERSHIP | CHANGE-MANAGEMENT | CONFIDENCE

FLY THE AIRCRAFT!

What is really important? Those who know their 'fly the aircraft,' keep calm and maintain a clear focus, when it gets turbulent. Being well-prepared means having clear priorities.

"I WAS SURE I COULD DO IT"

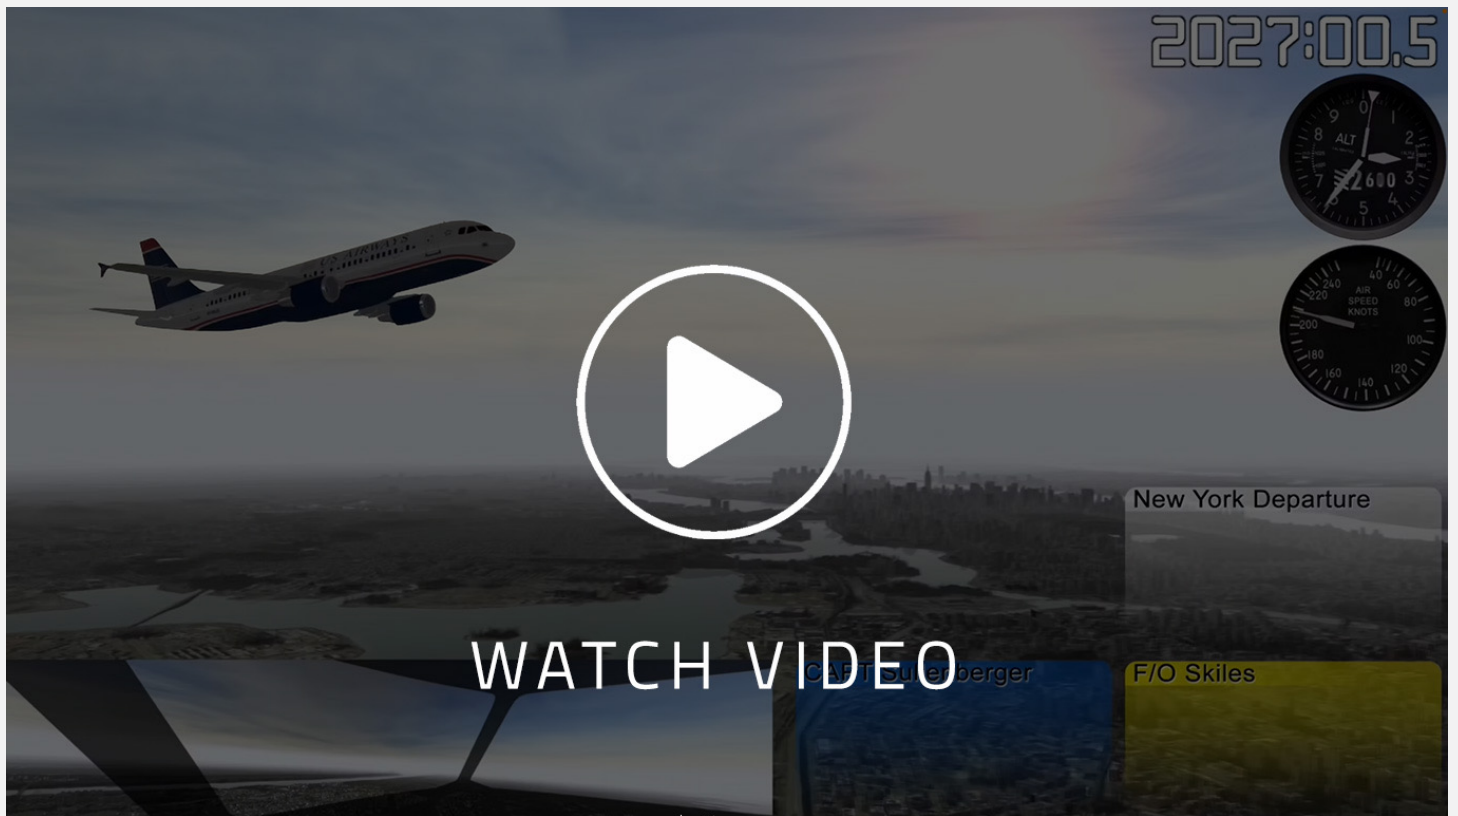

Captain 'Sully' gained confidence in the many 'Decision Points' in his career: "My entire life I've been trained for this very moment." Growth always takes place beyond the comfort zone.

THE CREW MAKES THE DIFFERENCE

Those who want to reach their goals must reach people. Sully knew that left on his own devices, he could not save a single life. Leadership also means stopping silo-thinking and doing whatever it takes to help a team reach its full potential.

Confidence changes everything.«*

DECISION-MAKING | COMMUNICATION | RESILIENCE

YOU CAN'T PULL OFF THE ROAD

Neither in the cockpit nor in life do things always go according to plan. No matter how good the plan is. Pilots train changing situations. The first step to a good decision is to accept the situation.

PILOT OR PASSENGER?

Whenever we take a firm stand and move forward, we make ourselves assailable. But pressure is a privilege. We're pilots in whatever we do each and every day.

THE INNER COMPASS

Numbers, facts and procedures are important. But no checklist will make the decision for you. A good decision requires both, our ratio and the courage to follow your inner voice.

»You don't always get applause for making bold decisions.«
